

Attachment to Comment by HOA Attorneys in Support of
Petition to Amend Rule 31(d),
Arizona Rules of the Supreme Court
(signed petitions)

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name:
Title: Managing Director
Company: Edmund Edmund
Date: 6/8/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name:  James D. ATKINSON
Title: Attorney
Company: Carpenter Hazelwood Delgado & Wood PLLC
Date: 6/15/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name:

J.M. [Signature]

Title:

Partner

Company:

Carpenter Hazkwood Delgado & Libal, P/C

Date:

6/16/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name: Reed Fradette
Title: attorney
Company: Carpenter Hazardous Relgator Wood
Date: 6/15/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name: ~~Scott B. Carpenter~~ Scott B. Carpenter
Title: Managing Partner
Company: Carpenter, Hazelwood, Delgado & Wood, PLC
Date: 6-15-11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name: _____ (Javier Delgado)
Title: Partner
Company: Carpenter Hazelwood Delgado Wood, P.C.
Date: June 15, 2011

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name: JAMES H. HAZLEWOOD
Title: PARTNER
Company: CARPENTIER, HAZLEWOOD, DELGADO & WOOD, PLLC
Date: 6/19/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name:

CHAD MIESEN

Title:

ATTORNEY

Company:

CARTER, HAZLEWOOD, DELGADO & WOOD P.C.

Date:

6/15/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name:

Jason Miller

Title:

Associate Attorney

Company:

Caputo, Hazlewood, Delgado & Wood, PLLC

Date:

6/15/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name:

Lindsey O'Connor / Indy O'Connell

Title:

Attorney

Company:

Carpenter, Haskewood, Delgado & Wood, P.C.

Date:

06/15/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name: Nikita V. Patel / [Signature]
Title: Attorney
Company: Carpenter, Hazlewood, Delgado & Wood, PLC
Date: 06/15/2010

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name: Mark K. Sahl
Title: Attorney
Company: Carpenter Harwood Delgado & Wood PLLC
Date: 6/15/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name: Jason E. Smith
Title: Attorney
Company: Carpenter Hazlewood Delgado & Wood, PLC
Date: 6/15/11

Attorney Petition in Support of Adding an Exemption to Rule 31(d) for Property Management Companies Preparing, Signing, and Filing Notices of Liens

We are attorneys who regularly represent planned community associations and condominium associations, collectively known as home owner associations or HOAs. We advise HOAs about their legal rights and obligations regarding broad-ranging topics, including enforcing CC&Rs, regular and special assessments, liens, directors' duties, open meetings, elections, record keeping and review, and vendor and developer disputes.

CC&Rs typically authorize HOAs to collect assessments from homeowners and to record notices of claims of lien for any unpaid assessments. Pursuant to A.R.S. §§ 33-1256 and 33-1807, HOAs automatically have statutory liens on units and homes for the late payment of assessments. These liens are perfected upon recording of the CC&Rs, but the associations that we work with regularly choose to record notices of the liens to encourage prompt payment of past due assessments and to put third parties on notice of the liens.

Most CC&Rs also authorize HOA boards to identify a "managing agent" to carry out the associations' day-to-day activities. The majority of the HOAs that we advise contract with property management companies to serve as the "managing agent." The management contracts between an HOA and a property management company typically establish a principal-agent relationship, with all state laws applicable to agency relationships becoming part of the agreement. As an agent, the property management company owes the HOA fiduciary duties and must act in the HOA's best interest in matters connected with the management of the property. Thus, in addition to being accountable for any breaches of the management contract, a property management company may also be held liable for breaches of its fiduciary duties.

One of the many duties that HOAs regularly delegate to property management companies as their managing agents is the responsibility for preparing, signing, and filing notices of liens for late payment of assessments. We believe that it is appropriate for HOAs to delegate these ministerial tasks to property management companies with which the HOAs have contracted to serve as the HOAs' managing agents. Therefore, we support the proposed change to Rule 31(d) of the Arizona Rules of Supreme Court affirming the ability of management companies to prepare, sign, and record notices of assessment liens on behalf of associations.

Name: JAMES ROGER WOOD
Title: Attorney, Partner
Company: Carpenter Hazelwood Delgado & Wood
Date: 6/17/2011